

Tool Time!

Old tools become new treasures

By DIVA BARGAIN SHOPPER
SPECIAL TO GET STUFF

This Diva isn't one to be found in the workshop, but I did take a wood shop class in high school, but enough about me! Today, with the help of a letter from a reader, we're going to talk shop.

Steve and Lyz of Hollywood write:

"Steve is very handy around the house. He was interested in a collection of Sears Craftsman tools. There was an electric chain saw, electric buzz saw, and electric sander, all in their original cases, and a few other Craftsman tools, along with a pick-ax and a sledge hammer. We got the entire lot for $100. Steve said that they were worth well over $400 as a whole."

What a way to get what you want at a fraction of the cost! If you're lucky to find such a bounty of tools, check them to make sure they're in good working order. You can ask the seller to plug them into an outlet to make sure they can be turned on. And don't forget to wear your safety goggles!

This all got me thinking about searching for antique tools. I'm not an antique tool collector, but I know a few people who are. My good friend James has found some great items by searching through the junk boxes sitting on the ground at garage and yard sales.

James says, usually tools are just thrown into a box because they may be dirty and are typically heavy. He says to look for not only traditional types of tools, but also agricultural tools, medical tools, and wood or metal tackle, tool and sewing boxes. Kitchen tools and gadgets are always popular and an inexpensive way to decorate an area that you want to look homey. Kitchen items are often grouped together in a box that you have to sort through. Watch out for knives that may have been thrown into the mix. Ouch!

I checked online for what's hot in old tools and found an antique wood-working 24" wood clock face level, made in Chicago in 1896. I put this item on my 'watched' list to see what it went for at auction end which was a whopping $1,400 plus shipping. I also tracked a circa 1920 tackle box made by Trunk Luggage Company of Wisconsin. It sold for $202 plus shipping. Imagine finding these things at a yard sale!

To see what people are collecting and what they will pay, research auction sites online. Don't limit your research to what's selling now. Google around and see if you can find past items sold at auctions or online. Now get busy, research and look at the classifieds and see what's for sale.
